

Safe Electricity®

Safe Electricity is a multi-media public awareness program designed to provide information to consumers and compliment the safety-education activities of utilities and educators. Safe Electricity provides life-saving information through many venues, including radio and television public services announcements, news releases and articles and its comprehensive web site. Safe Electricity has received national recognition for the quality and scope of its programs and services.

Safe Electricity was founded in 2001 by the Illinois Electric Council, a not-for-profit educational organization of electric utilities, the University of Illinois, and other organizations dedicated to promoting electrical safety and efficiency.

Take time to visit the Safe Electricity Web site. <http://www.safeelectricity.org>

Because we respect your right to privacy, Safe Electricity does not collect any information about you (except information that is automatically collected as noted below) when you visit our Web site unless you decide to provide information to us.

When you visit any Web site, the site can collect certain personal information. Safe Electricity does collect and temporarily store the following information about each visitor to our Web site:

- The name of your Internet service provider (ISP).
- The time and date of your visit.
- The pages you visited on our Web site.

This information is used only to help us improve our Web site.